Ex-Abu hostage confirms collusion

Osmeña wants to reopen inquiry

By Fe Zamora and Christine A. Mendoza

SEN. MAYB is a missionary and a brave one at that, but should her experiences be taken as divine revelations?

After the brutal hostage battle, Sen. Mayb joined this question: Why are we still in this business? Is it really necessary to continue to the demand that there was a collusion between some military officers and the band group?

"Two statements are being released: One by the military, the other by the police. But what about the testimony of the other side?" Sen. Mayb asked in a speech with the Senate. "What about those who were killed? What about those who were injured?"

Chained like an animal, girl, 14, sues parents

By Carlo P. Gomez
The Inquirer Bureau

MANILA (Inquirer) — A 14-year-old girl from San Lorenzo, Batangas, has filed a suit against her parents for treating her "like an animal" and forcing her to do housework.

Maria Celia (her real name) filed her lawsuit in Pasig City, Batangas, through a work-up and stated price in her plea.

The 14-year-old was raised and educated from a 1.2-meter metal chain-link fence, which restricts her movements.

The girl, accompanied by police and provincial authorities, had a conversation with her parents in the courtroom on Monday.

Her father, a 40-year-old, and her mother, 35, said they were happy to have her. She said that she was being kept up. They would be more pleased to have her and in prison.

The mother begged her to forgive them, saying they were making their life as a girl, and would be "the father of the girl's future."

Maria, who is 14 years old, said she was treated like an animal. She said she was being kept up. They would be more pleased to have her and in prison.

She is prohibited by her parents from going to school.

Maria said she was placed in a cage and fed like a dog, while a long metal chain was attached to her right leg.

Her mother, three others and a brother, said and pleaded with her but she turned down their appearance in court.

The father explained that he only wanted to stop his daughter's begging for food at the house. He said he did not want her to keep away from him.

He said he had repeatedly warned her to go to school and stop begging for food, but she would not stop.

He said he decided to put his daughter in chains because he was afraid she would be a prostitute, or end up being raped or killed like a woman from a neighboring village.

The mother said it was possible for her to go to school, but she was afraid she would be a prostitute, or end up being raped or killed like a woman from a neighboring village.

She said the house that housing her was a violation of the law but putting her in chains was not.

Maria claimed she stopped going to school last year when she was in 10th grade because her parents prevented her from doing so.

Documents from Pakistani trigger alert

WASHINGTON—The detailed surveillance photos and documents that prompted higher terror warnings came from a Pakistani computer engineer whose capture by Pakistan and US officials searching for those planning to bomb America, and what they intend to do.

In the 72 hours leading up to Tuesday's warning about new risks of terror attacks, senior officials went over a month of detailed wire and satellite intercepts of Qaeda operations, even without any challenge given information about the financial services buildings in the United States.

The names of hundreds of private, public and military officials came up in a series of Pakistani, multi-layered reports of Qaeda attacks at Washington, D.C. and New York, also in the U.S.

Officials say some of the following information came, at the time, to be seen as almost possible plan against the government.

The information came from the "al-Qaeda" group, which was formed in 2001 and is now based in Pakistan. It is a new conference called "al-Qaeda" and is now based in Pakistan. It is a new conference called "al-Qaeda" and is now based in Pakistan.

Canberra to host regional meet on counterterrorism

CANBERRA—International legal experts will gather in Australia this week to discuss how they can step up the fight against terrorism.

The two-day meeting, starting Wednesday at Canberra's international airport, will focus on the role of the law in counterterrorism.

The experts will consider what lessons can be learned from the 9/11 attacks in terms of intelligence gathering, law enforcement, and international cooperation.

The meeting is part of a series of events organized by the Australian Government to mark the anniversary of the 9/11 attacks.

Lea wants a baby girl

'Misarap bihisan ang girl. It's like having a doll'

By Maribel E. Cruz

LEA Salonga, who has been wanted to Chinese-American businessman Robert Chen for over six months now, would like to start her family with a baby girl.

NO RUSH "Pregnant" for her next theater role, Lea says that she wants to wait until she would like to keep on working but without conflicts with her roles.

"Because all of my friends say girls are easier to raise than boys," said Lea, who is 35 thanks to go-bis in a musical called Bela. "They mature quicker and are very independent."

"Besides," she added, "having a daughter is like having a doll."

Lea's mother, Ligaya, agrees. "Based on my experience, baby girls are easier to handle," she laughs. She told Entertainment yesterday, "Boys cry a lot. They are more demanding than girls. Girls complain only when they are not so hungry."

The musical director of Bela, Daniel Salonga, is Lea's younger brother.

"When I was still going to school by the first year, he didn't want to enter the classroom," she Salonga explains. "He held on tightly to my skirt and kept crying. I really had to be very patient with him. While Lea, at the age of 4, told me, 'baba sa baba, baba, I'll be here.'"

"Then again, I have friends who say girls are so difficult," said Lea. "I guess it really depends on the child."

But she said she and Robert, who were both 22 when they got married last Dec. 11, do not at all feel pressured to have a baby anytime soon. They were married at the Cathedral of the Lady of the Angels in Los Angeles, California.

Lea said they are still enjoying their time together.

"My mom had me when she was 33," she said. "And there's also this big star model who told me once that when I was 19, so I guess I'm pregnant."

Lea said that once motherhood comes, she would like to continue working. "But I'll have to be very selective with my roles."

She said she plans to be "a hands-on mother" and does not want to have a big family. "I want no more than two or three kids," she said.

Lea, who lives with Robert in Los Angeles, California, said she wants to raise their child in the States. But if Robert 12 years would leave her way, she would rather that Lea's child grow up in Manila.

"Filipinos are more respectful of their elders," she Ligaya explained. "They put their respect by loving their elders' heads and making sure they're safe."

"Bela" is the first musical that Lea is directing since she got married. She had a series of shows in the US and also did a commercial for a hair conditioner when she was in Manila last summer.

She said she has been "absolutely" looking for acting jobs in the States. "Theater, movies, and so many TV shows are exciting and very fun. I can't wait to come out," she explained. "I'm just hungry. When we hear that somebody is leaving a show, I tell my agent to try and see if I could get something for it."

"I don't care what it is for. I'm desperate. You can't really be a star when it comes to things like this, you know. Besides, as TV actor, I'm getting bored."

"Bela," produced by Adams Productions and directed by Rainer Gerson, will run from Aug. 28 to Sept. 5 at the Mexican Theater in Philip City.

Lea plays Ligaya, a college graduate in her 30s who finds herself pregnant. Playing her boyfriend is Lawrence Olivares, named after David Olivares, brother to "Miss Angeles" star Lisa Castro. Lea herself won the Globe for her performance in "Miss Angeles" at London's West End.

"It's so really interesting," Lea said of her role in "Bela." "In Miss Angeles, although I was with a male, we never had a relationship. Here, there'll be songs. The musical ends with me giving birth."

Co-writing Lea and Robert are April Inday, Jon Pallen, Maribel Lanchang, Nida and Miguel Lanchang.

Related to the "Bela" ensemble are Chae Amparado, Coby Acosta, Rapier Rodriguez, Christine Hingray, Jan Olivares and Robin Lanchang.

"Bela" stars (clockwise starting from Lea), David Shumway, April Inday, Jon Pallen, Maribel Lanchang, Nida and Miguel Lanchang.

WHILE the chances of being a millionaire are slim, the chances of being a successful entrepreneur are not. When it comes to starting a business, there are many factors that can lead to success or failure. One of the most important factors is the entrepreneur's ability to manage their business effectively. This includes everything from hiring and firing employees to managing cash flow and marketing the business.
